Set up of the relay

During the workshop three to four groups will be formed. Each of these groups will embark on a relay in which they crowdsource input for each others learning question. The way this will be done is as follows:

- A group consists of four people, each with their own learning question.
- Each week the learning question of one person will be posted in the LinkedIn group so that it can be answered by all group members. This learning question has been sharpened during the workshop.
- Group members will reply to this question as soon as they can - with a deadline of one week later.
- You will crowdsource input from within your own network and your personal experience in response to this learning question. This input can consist of tips such as: tools and methodologies, names of people or organisations to get in touch with, sharing personal experience, reading tips etc.
- You can post your input on the LinkedIn group as the week goes along and involve others to do the same (as soon as the LinkedIn group has gotten an open status). You can also choose to use different social media and offline channels.
- The answers of the group members will build on each other by taking the previous answer into account.
- When the round has closed (after one week), participants of other groups can join as well - ideally, again, building on former replies.

What we will provide

- Theoretical framing and content during the kick-off workshop and the webinars.
- Practical tools to (collectively) reflect on the impact of you & your activities.
- An online learning environment with Zoom for webinars, LinkedIn for dialogue and Dropbox where you can find all Relay materials and exchange documents.
- A closed LinkedIn Social Innovation Relay group, to allow you to share your questions and answers in a safe environment
 - We will discuss with you if you feel happy to share questions & answers with a wider audience (for example by opening the LinkedIn group)
- An online platform to showcase your initiative and learning process on the SIC website: <https://www.siceurope.eu/learning-relay>
- Access to people in networks of SIC partners
- Support during the relay, such as the facilitation of knowledge exchange, answering questions, access to our ZOOM online meet-up & webinar tool and support with communication.
- Each group will have a SIC member assigned to support & facilitate the group learning process. This is either a SIC network facilitator or a member of the organising Relay team. Your group supporter is your first contact point when you have any questions. During the workshop in Rotterdam, we will collectively decide which group will cooperate with which supporter.

What will you bring in?

- Motivation & curiosity to be part of an experimental learning format
- Communication: share experiences, knowledge and network - offline and online
- Participation: in workshop and in the three online meet-ups & working on and submitting the assignments
- Action: organise a ripple effect activity during the two month period of the relay
- Time investment: about 4 hours a week during the 4 relay rounds.
